Easily Dragonet Prophocy, but Moon Rising rose it even higher! I loved the thought of a school in the world of Pyrrhia, and that it was made by those who basically saved the world from total destruction of civilization in truth don't know who would win, maybe none of them would ever win even without the dragonets?

the fifth one Sunny was my personal favorite throughout the series because she was so much like me, so having the book in her pov was so different from the others oh i personally ship her with no one because she seems so determined with the school and i knew she would be so caught up in taking care of the jade academy she wouldn't have time to be in a relationship ----- Werewolfwarrior

My friend recommended WoF to me when I was a fourth grader. I didn't get to it until fifth grade, but when I read The Dragonet Prophecy... I wished I had read this earlier. I am going into seventh grade this August and can't wait to start the third arc.

To be honest, I was a fan (I am going to refrain from calling myself a "fanwing" for reasons that might not be taken lightly on a site like this) since 2013, when I read the first book and absolutely loved it. I've only just started reading the rest of the books since last week, because... I don't know why... I guess I just decided to spend my time on getting good at cs instead. Its nice to see how much of a community has grown out of a relatively small fan-base from when I joined... because the longer you've been a fan of something, obviously makes you superior to other fans. (That was sarcastic for the record)

Hmmm.....

I love dragons, so if it's a book with a dragon on the cover, I'll read it.
That is how I found the WoF series. Now, I really liked the first book, but I became an instant FanWing probably after book 2. When I got to the part where Tsunami finds out the dragon in the arena that she killed was her father(sorry about the spoiler), I was HOOKED, because I love books with huge plot twists. So, that is probably what made me a FanWing.

P.S. If you've never seen me before, I'm new to the Forums, so that's why.

The first book had me hooked!
I only just started reading WoF, but I finished the first two books very quickly and am currently more than half way into the third one!
Originally, I didn't really think I'd end up enjoying these books as much as I did--and currently do--but the more I read into the first book, the more I fell in love with the series and each dragonet of destiny. I guess what really drew me into the books was the fact that each female dragonet is so cool in their own unique way, and I think it's very important to have cool and relatable female characters in literature. My favorite characters are tsunami, who had me hooked from the start, and Glory, who I love just as much. But yeah. I guess that's it.

I read book 10 and almost died because I re-re-re-re-read it because I liked it so much.
Which lead me to buying a box set on amazon, which I liked just as much, leading me to use forty dollars pre-ordering the next book AND finally breathes the rest of the second arc.
